FIVE BANDITS HOLD UP "THIS'LL-DO INN," SOUTH LANGHORNE; OFFICER GIVES CHASE AND CAPTURES THREE; TWO ESCAPE AFOOT

One Holds Proprietress, Mrs. Anna Bednor, at Bay With A Sawed-Off Shotgun—Secure $16—Escape in Stolen Car—Youths Are Aged 16 to 18

Three of five youthful bandits who held up the proprietress of "This'll-Do Inn," on the Lincoln Highway at South Langhorne, last night, were taken into custody by Private Leibergall, Pennsylvania Motor Policeman, at Philadelphia City Line, a few minutes after they escaped with $16 in cash. The other two escaped when the car was halted by the officer from Oxford Valley barracks, and a widespread search for them is on today.

The trio now being held by police are: Frank Camuglia, Frank DiPilla, and Rocco Cavallo, all of Staten Island, N. Y.

The two who escaped, and for whom Privates Jones and Harris made a search last night, are: Ralph Saunders, alias "Whitey," aged 18; and Charles Curcio, 18, both of Staten Island, N. Y.

The quintet, made up of young men from 16 to 18 years of age, entered the tap-room of "This'll-Do" Inn at 11:50, one of the five being armed with a sawed-off shotgun. None were masked. They accosted Mrs. Anna Bednor, proprietress, ordering that she turn over all cash to them. One of the five then proceeded to empty the cash register, securing $16.

After the bandits hurriedly left, before any other occupants of the building knew what had occurred, Mrs. Bednor notified police, and Leibergall gave chase, apprehending the car with New York license plates at City Line. He had no difficulty in taking the three into custody, and no shots were fired. The other two made a get-away afoot, however, and when officers Jones and Harris arrived a few minutes later they took up the search for the missing men, but to no avail. It was stated that they hurried away in the direction of Trevoze.

Mrs. Bednor was able to inform the police that the car used by the five was a gray sedan, bearing New York license plates. It was later ascertained that the car was a stolen vehicle.

Mrs. Bednor also mentioned that one of the young men had on his coat a button in the national colors, and bearing an American flag.

Saunders, known as "Whitey," is said to have worn brown trousers, and a brown leather jacket with green cloth sleeves. Curcio wore a white sweater under his overcoat.

The trio now in custody is being held for a hearing.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

Strikes

Washington, Feb. 5. IF, as the President, Secretary Knox and practically every other Administration spokesman has asserted, speed in production is the overwhelmingly vital necessity of our defense effort, then the number of strikes which are occurring all over the country, many of them in plants with defense jobs, is a pretty appalling thing.

THE first compilation of these is printed this week by the United States News under the caption "Work Stoppages." Declaring that no information on the subject is available from any Government source, and therefore the total is not complete, this authority lists 150 strikes in the month of January, in defense and non-defense industries, affecting a good many thousands of men. Of these strikes, 76 involve AFL unions and 57 CIO unions. Three others involve both AFL and CIO, and in fourteen cases the names of the unions are not given. These 150 are the strikes about which it was possible to obtain information. There are others not yet reported. No one in the Administration knows the exact situation.

THIS is a pretty frightening state of affairs. We are told that unless this country exerts itself to the limit within the next ninety days it may be too late to save England from destruction and ourselves from great national peril. There is reason to believe both these things to be true. Yet, in face of them, reports of stoppages in key industries pour into Washington and practically nothing is done about them. Obviously, nothing can slow down our production of the material England needs

Darlan Confers With Petain

Vichy, France, Feb. 6—French Navy Minister Admiral Jean Darlan conferred at length with Premier Marshal Petain today and then departed for Paris to relay to Germany the aged Marshal's reply to the latest Nazi demands.

In Paris Darlan will consult Pierre Laval, whom the Germans want reinstated in the Vichy government, and with Otto Abetz, the German ambassador to France.

Laval himself, it was understood, wants to divorce himself entirely from the Vichy government and set up a "rump" government in Paris, where he would enjoy unrestricted power in dealing with the German military occupants of the French capital.

Laval's dislike of the Vichy set-up is said to be based upon an article of the Vichy constitution, which places distinct personal responsibilities on the shoulders of each individual minister.

Well-informed Vichy circles said that Darlan would return from Paris tomorrow night or Saturday, enabling Petain to announce outcome of the long crisis in a radio address to the nation over the week-end.

BUNGALOW GUTTED AT ANDALUSIA BY A MID-DAY BLAZE

Mrs. Oscar Schmidt Burned On Hand; Attracts Attention of Passerby

DAMAGE ESTIMATE $1000

Cornwells and Union Companies Battle Fire; Use Tank Wagon, Booster Pumps

ANDALUSIA, Feb. 6—Unable to battle the flames which so quickly enveloped the kitchen of her home, and spread like wild-fire to the other rooms of her bungalow, Mrs. Oscar Schmidt, Whitaker avenue, rushed out of doors yesterday shortly before noon calling for aid. In the blaze Mrs. Schmidt had one hand painfully burned, but refused to leave for medical aid until she saw that firemen had overcome the flames.

The fire did damage to the extent of approximately $1,000, the frame bungalow being entirely gutted.

Mrs. Schmidt, who was in the act of replacing the tank on the oil stove in the kitchen, was burned on the one hand, when the flames shot in all directions.

According to reports given Cornwells and Union Fire Co. members, Mrs. Schmidt had filled the tank, and was replacing the tank on the stove. It is stated that the top was not securely placed on the tank, and oil sprayed on burners which had remained lighted.

Rushing out-of-doors, Mrs. Schmidt called "Fire," attracting the attention of a passerby who summoned firemen.

The bungalow was gutted, with all furniture, clothing and personal belongings being lost in the blaze.

There was no insurance carried on the property, it is said.

Firemen of the two companies used two 1000-gallon tank wagons and booster pumps in fighting the fire, the blaze being extinguished in approximately 20 minutes.

To Ask Senate To Confirm Winant As Ambassador

By George Durno
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(INS)—President Roosevelt this afternoon will ask the Senate to confirm John G. Winant of New Hampshire, a Republican, as the new United States ambassador to Great Britain.

Winant, who is now director of the International Labor office, is a former governor of his home state. He will succeed Joseph P. Kennedy, who resigned at the Court of St. James. It was expected the Senate would confirm his nomination without any particular objection.

Although a Republican, the 51-year-old Winant supported President Roosevelt for re-election in both 1936 and 1940. Prior to the 1936 conventions, he was mentioned by some of his friends as a possible GOP presidential candidate. Mr. Roosevelt, however, brought him to Washington to become first chairman of the Social Security Board and organize that far-jung agency.

Clean shaven, Winant has been described as resembling Abraham Lincoln in physique. He is lank-limbed and sparing of speech. He preserves a dry, unsmiling attitude characterized by two habits—chair-teetering and a constantly futile attempt to keep a black forelock off his forehead.

Since the European war started, work of the ILO at Geneva virtually has come to a standstill. The ambassador-designate nevertheless has commuted to an extent by clipper to watch over affairs of the labor office. In his ILO position, Winant has come to know many of the European leaders, particularly the labor spokesmen.

WINTER AND MARS

Old Man Winter is by no means the unknown soldier, but the hoary ancient persists in occupying a mysterious role, the unknown quantity which again and again trips the statists and prognosticators.

It is not necessary to go back so far as Napoleon and his disastrous winter foray into Russia. So recently as the World War the old fellow, with the beard of icicles elbowing his chilly way into the fray and held both sides at bay. In the first winter of the war, the winter of 1914, both sides bucked weather conditions to little avail on the Western Front. This quiet was repeated in the second, third and fourth winters.

In fact, some experts on military matters have ascribed to the invincibility of winter the inauguration of trench warfare, for after the attacks by both sides lost momentum against snow and ice in the first November, the armies of the Allies and the Germans dug in along a 600-mile front, from the English Channel to Switzerland.

Attacks by French and Germans bogged down in deep snow winter after winter. The experience of the World War has not gone unheeded by either side in the present conflict.
All the world is wondering if weather conditions will compel Hitler to postpone his "all-out" offensive against Great Britain until spring, as he did last year, or if he will prefer bucking winter weather to giving the British several more months of breathing spell and preparation.

ALL-TIME HIGH

In the midst of winter is a good time to prepare for spring and summer, at least when it comes to baseball, for in winter the moguls meet and out of their conferences invariably come news.

The latest item is to the effect that the highest salary contract ever given a pitcher has just been signed by Bobby Feller, who will hurl the ball for the Cleveland Indians next season for $30,000, an all-time record. The highest figure previously recorded was the $27,500 which Lefty Grove received from the Boston Red Sox.

Some fans may ask, "How can a 22-year-old lad be worth $30,000 a year?" Why not? This is a keenly competitive game; a player is a winner only a few years at best, and if in that time he draws long lines to the box office, he earns all the team treasury will give him. Incidentally, the photograph which was taken at the moment of signing shows the chief executives of the Cleveland outfit all smiles, as if they, too, had made a good bargain.

Doubtless they have, if one may judge from the modest demeanor of Bob Feller, who won 27 games last year but makes no boast of what he's going to do next time. All he wants, he says, is to help his team win the pennant. A becoming attitude for a youth of 22 who is likely to walk off next summer with $1,000 for every couple of hours of the work he likes best.

California girl was too nervous to drive a car but has learned to pilot a plane. When she is up in a plane, there is only one thing that might hit her.

Rumors that Wendell Willkie is to be included in the administration at Washington persist. Naturally—harnessing of all that energy looks like a good idea.

WOTAN'S WEDGE by FRANCIS GERARD A PRELUDE TO BLITZKRIEG

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

When order was once more restored and the two men were sitting cupping two big, pot-bellied brandy glasses in their hands, Captain Lee asked, "What are you up to with Slimy?"

"Stuck a gun into my ribs the other night," said Sir John Meredith with an air of studied indignation.

"What!" exclaimed the other.
"The impudent—but I bet he had good cause," he ended shrilly.

"What's the name of your man at the Ministry of Transport?"

"Lee," said Captain Lee.

"What another of you? I don't believe it."

"No need to be comic," frowned the other. "And he's no relation.
I'm the last of my line."

"Yes," chuckled Meredith. "The terminus all right, buffers and all!"

After his large lunch with Captain Lee, Meredith strolled to the Ministry of Transport. It was in that somnolent hour about 3 p.m., when English thoughts veer towards tea, that Meredith began his fifth interview of the day.

Christopher Lee proved to be an old young man of the type found frequently in the Civil Service.
Possessed of a University degree and a calm official manner, he looked sleepy but was not.

"Makyn's?" he echoed John's query. "Yes, I have assembled some data,"—he pronounced it "datah"—"but it's not, as yet, conclusive."

"May I see what you've got?"

"You may, though it's rather irregular."

"So is the fact that you're supposed to be working for the Government," retorted Meredith.

"Quite. But I don't think we need go into that. Here's the file."

Meredith stared rather blankly at columns and columns of figures, place-names, times and mileages.

"All very interesting, Mr. Lee.
But what does it mean?"

"Logs," replied the other.

"It might just as well be logarithms as far as I'm concerned.
Come on, please explain these logs, preferably in words of one syllable."

Mr. Lee regarded Meredith un-winkingly, then said, "What exactly do you expect to find?"

Sir John smiled. "I don't expect anything. I hope, is there anything you can tell me about this company that doesn't click?"

"Doesn't click?" echoed the other.

"Anything odd," explained John.

"Yes," said Lee promptly.

"Ah, now we're going to town," said Meredith slangily. "Tell me—"

"Some of Makyn's lorries run to the north of Scotland. The furthest point, according to their logbooks, is Wick in Caithness. That's fifteen miles due south from John O'roats."

Meredith looked puzzled. "What about this John O'roats?"

"Well, according to these logs, Makyn's lorries usually reach Wick about midnight. Now, I'll tell you an extraordinary thing," Lee looked as though he were about to disclose a cabinet secret. "They don't leave Wick on their return until one the following afternoon."

Having said this, Mr. Christopher Lee sat back with an expression compounded of pride and antipication.

"Very interesting," said Meredith. "Very interesting, indeed!
What does it mean?"

"Don't you know about the law?"
asked the other.

"I used to," smiled the veteran minion of it.

Then Lee explained, "According to law, a lorry driver is entitled to ten hours in which to get a proper meal and sleep after he has been driving a certain number of hours.
That applies in the case of these fellows driving up to Wick. We know their time schedule."

"Ten hours off," said Meredith.

"And they get there at midnight so you would expect them to be pushing off at ten, next morning."

"Not quite," replied Lee. "They're allowed an hour for loading, filling up with petrol, and so on."

"So there's still two hours unaccounted for. Is that what you're trying to tell me?"

"Exactly," nodded Mr. Lee.

"I can't see the significance of that," Meredith observed. "It may merely mean that Makyn's are kind employers who give their help a bit longer to sleep."

"My dear fellow," said Lee suddenly, "if I weren't actually sitting in a Government office I'd use some rather ugly language right now! Nice, kind employers, eh?

Something happens during those two hours. That's my hunch anyway."

After leaving the Ministry of Transport, Sir John Meredith visited a discreet house in Port Street.
It housed the offices of Rogers, Peabody and Smithson, Solicitors, upon the ground floor, and also the headquarters of the Intelligence Departments of both Foreign and Colonial Offices on the first, second and third floors.

Meredith produced a visiting card upon which he drew two small, concentric circles. He handed it to the solicitor's clerk and asked if he might see Mr. Peabody. A minute later, Sir Hector McAllister was shaking hands with him across his desk.

"What is it, John?" asked the chief of the Intelligence Department. "I can see from your expression this isn't a social call."

Meredith lit a cigarette. "Sir Hector, I've got a strong hunch and it's leading me somewhere."

He paused, then went on, "Has your department ever come across a fellow known as Siegfried Kloff-er? No? Well, d'you know of a gentleman called Igor Levinsky who calls himself a Russian?"

"Yes, I know of Levinsky. He's a Bolshevik with a difference. But why d'you say 'calls himself'?"

Sir John shrugged. "I suppose it is possible," he said, "for a German to be called Levinsky, particularly if he's a German Jew; but I've never heard of any Jew in Germany with a duelling scar."

Sir Hector's eyes never left the other's face. "What's this all about, John?"

"Well, it started down in Battersea with a coroner's inquest," said Meredith who told Sir Hector all he had learned up to his arrival in McAllister's office that afternoon.

When he had finished, the big Scotsman pressed a bell button on his desk. When his secretary came into the room, Sir Hector said, "Get me Chief Inspector Hailey of the Special Branch on the phone."

"What are you ringing Hailey for?" asked Meredith curiously.

"I'm going to get him down here," replied the other. "We're going to have a three-cornered conference . . . Special Branch, Intelligence and Sir John Meredith."

Chief Inspector Hailey of the Special Branch was not at Scotland Yard when Sir Hector McAllister's secretary telephoned and it was not until after dinner that night, at McAllister's house in Grosvenor Square, that the three noted detectives got together. Meredith had dined with the chief of the Intelligence Department. When Hailey arrived, he found Sir John and his host settled in deep chairs drawn up to the fire in the library.

As Meredith sipped at his brandy and Curacao, he knew a strange prickling at his scalp, a feeling of premonition. . . . Somehow he knew in his very bones that this evening would prove the forerunner of an adventure whose end he could not foresee.

"Evening, Hailey," said McAllister, crossing to a tray. "What'll you have?"

"Thanks, Sir Hector, I'd like a whisky and soda; feel just about played out. Our chaps are all wrapped up in this German Jew refugee business so that I've only got half my men dealing with the
I. R. A. explosions."

"Think anything really serious will result?" asked Meredith.

"It's a fair—" Hailey checked himself, then went on, "It's a real question. If they were trying to blow up any strategic point, we could take our precautions, but they don't seem to mind what they dynamite."

"It's an ugly form of fighting," frowned Sir Hector.

"It's not fighting at all," observed Meredith. "It's a sort of blackmail.
Hoping to stampede the public into bleating like frightened sheep for the Government to do something to protect them. My own belief is that the thing will defeat itself soon. I don't think an appalling air-raid on London, for instance, would cow our people. On the contrary, I think it'd make them so bloody savage, they'd fight to the last. Bad psychologists, those heavy-handed bombers!"

"I rather agree with you, John," said McAllister. "But we haven't brought the Chief Inspector here to discuss I. R. A. terrorists." He turned and spoke to Hailey. "Tell Meredith what you told me the other day."

"The big Special Branch chief grinned sheepishly and said, 'Well, the fact is, Meredith came in the other day, saw me, and I passed him on to Blewitt. Well, Blewitt thought he'd go to work on this Igor Levinsky himself, and keep under his hat what he found.'"

Sir John grinned and nodded.
"Did Blewitt find anything?"

Hailey shook his head doubtfully.
"Not much. It seems this Fellowship of the New Day has branches all over, particularly in so-called Red districts. For instance, there's a lodge, or whatever you like to call it, up in Glasgow, and this Levinsky pops up there pretty often. But he doesn't stay long. He goes north."

"He does, does he?" queried Meredith quietly. "Where to?"

"Well," replied Hailey, "we couldn't find that out for a time.
We've had men watching the rail and bus stations but we couldn't trace how he got out of Glasgow."

"I should have thought that was simple. He goes by motor," suggested Meredith.

Once more Hailey shook his head.
"No, he doesn't," he contradicted.
"We've checked all garages and we know he's not got a car of his own.
We're quite certain he doesn't go by automobile."

"Perhaps he's bought a bicycle," suggested Meredith lazily. "But anyway, how d'you know he goes north?"

"Well, we had a bit of luck," said the Chief Inspector. "Ever heard of a place called Sinclair's Bay?"

"Why ask us?" said McAllister.

"We haven't."

"Well, it's up on the northeast coast of Scotland."

"Don't tell me," said Meredith suddenly, "it's near a place called Wick?"

"Yes, it is," replied Hailey, looking surprised.

Sir Hector McAllister shot a quick glance at Meredith and said laconically, "Did you expect that?"

Meredith chewed his lip. "I don't really know, Sir Hector, whether I did or whether I didn't," he replied.
"It may mean a lot or it may mean nothing. Go on, Hailey. Let's hear about Igor Levinsky's capers."

"Well, as you may hear, there's a lot of smuggling goes on around our coasts even today."

"I know," said Meredith.

"Naughty yachtsmen bringing in half a bottle of brandy and not declaring it. All the way from Calais or Ostend. Contraband! Fearfully naughty!"

"Small stuff," said Hailey.

"That's not what I meant. Some of these coast dwellers are born smugglers. Well, a coastguard patrol saw some fellows near Sinclair's Bay one night and asked them what they were doing. Taking a walk, he was told. He took their names and who do you think one of them was?"

"Igor Levinsky," replied Sir Hector.
"We guessed that already."

"And Sinclair's Bay is near Wick," observed Meredith to the room at large.

"Not two and a half miles from it," nodded Hailey.

The Great Game of Politics

as much as "work stoppage" for any reason whatever. Obviously, labor strikes at this time in the United States will help Hitler, whose success menaces our safety, more than any other thing that possibly could happen.

THE more strikes we have, the less we can produce and the better the chance Mr. Hitler has of crushing the British and winning the war. That is too clear to be disputed. Nevertheless, the Administration, which insists—and rightly—that victory for Hitler would be calamitous for us, has no firm, clean-cut policy for dealing with this strike problem. On the contrary, the President has insisted upon splitting his defense organization evenly between industry and labor.

A LABOR leader has been put on as an associate director with co-equal power. Other labor leaders are constantly being fitted into the organization in order to "balance" the industrialists upon whom the President must rely for production. Mr. Hillman, head labor leader, is represented by his friends as anxious to reduce strikes and to co-operate with Mr.
Knudsen. There is no reason to disparage his good intentions, but the fact remains that he was put on the commission primarily to represent and look after the interests of labor and is under constant pressure to do exactly that —and does it.

IT also is the fact that some of the New Dealers who are strongly back of him are exceedingly hostile to and suspicious of the businessmen in the defense machine.
They feel that these have to be watched, blocked and checked.
Instead of being discouraged in this feeling by the Administration, the labor politicians are encouraged. Assuming, as seems justified, that this is really a labor government, some of the more aggressive labor leaders, who work closely with the New Deal radicals, see in the war an opportunity to get for organized labor three things it ardently wants—first, more political power; second, a larger proportion of the profits of industry; third, an approach to equality with industrial management in management.

IN other words, labor politicians and their New Deal allies have their minds more strongly fixed upon utilizing this crisis to advance labor's power along these lines than in co-operating with industry in speeding up defense production. Neither the friendly propaganda about Mr. Hillman's eagerness to co-operate nor the talk about labor's willingness to make "sacrifices" alters the fact. The plain truth is that the labor leaders are not willing to make any sacrifices at all, either in the way of relaxing labor laws which hamper production or in abridging their right to strike on defense work.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S insistence that there is no need for modification of the labor laws, and that "our social gains" must be preserved, has stiffened organized labor's disposition to regard itself as the favored class in this crisis just as it has been from the beginning of the Roosevelt regime.
And the recent decision of the Roosevelt majority on the Supreme Court, affirming the exemption of labor unions from the antitrust laws, tends to confirm them in that view. The Administration's attitude operates not to speed up the production for which the President calls, but to slow it down, by insisting that labor must not relinquish any of its "rights," one of which is the right to strike.
The Administration position is illogical and absurd. It frustrates its own declared purpose. It deplores the strikes when they occur, but it has no policy to avert them and it coddles the men responsible.

IT is absurd for the Administration to urge speed and appeal for nonpartisan support while it deals in such a fashion with the labor situation. Until the President finds a way to avert strikes and relax the hampering labor legislation, calling upon industry for greater speed does not make sense—because those are the things that prevent speed.

PERKASIE COUNCIL HAS A VERY BUSY SESSION

Adopt Budget, Fix the Tax Rate, Consider Plan For Light Bill Collection

PRESIDENT ENTERTAINS

PERKASIE, Feb. 6.—Highlights of the monthly meeting of Perkasio borough council, this week, were the adoption of the budget for the year, the fixing of the tax rate, and consideration of a plan for collection of delinquent electric light bills.

The tax rate for the current year was placed at 10 mills, the same as last year. The budget calls for an expenditure of $279,000, of which $144,000 will be used for the retirement of short term loans.

Upon the recommendation of Lloyd Harr, chairman of the electric light committee, Council approved a plan, which it is believed, will result in the collection of many of the delinquent electric light bills. A statement submitted to Council by the auditors shows that approximately $28,000 is outstanding in the electric light account. This amount, however, covers a period of about 10 years.

The plan adopted by Council is to present to each delinquent an agreement form, on which a specified amount of the delinquent bill shall be paid in addition to the monthly bill. The amount of the installment is to be determined by the consumer and is to be collected by the electric light department.

In case the delinquent refuses to sign the agreement, the service will be discontinued immediately, or if the consumer signs the agreement and then defaults, the service will also be discontinued immediately.

Submitting his report, Street Commissioner J. Frank Appleback stated that during the snow storm last week the borough plow traveled 80 miles in removing the snow from the streets.

Sales of current at the municipally owned electric light plant during the past month amounted to $8,460. Expenditures totaled $7,618, and the net earnings amounted to $842.67.

Prior to the business session members of Council were the guests of President Claude Benfield at a dinner. After the dinner Council inspected the fire house which was renovated at a cost of $5,000. The officials found the alterations to be quite satisfactory. Material used in the project cost about $200 and the labor was furnished by the W. P. A.

After the inspection Chief Burgess Harleigh M. Apple was authorized to purchase equipment for the new police headquarters in the fire house.

Flames Rout Families

Pittston, Feb. 6.—Twenty families were routed from their beds early today when a mine cave-in damaged properties for an area of three blocks in West Pittston.

Both police and fire stations in the area were affected by the cave-in, it was reported, and windows were shattered while cracks two feet deep appeared in the ground. Gas and water mains burst and all power lines were down, it was said.

Relief Costs Drop in New Jersey

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 6.—Charles R. Erdman, Jr., director of the State Municipal Aid Administration, today announced that 1940 relief expenditures in New Jersey dropped to $13,738,326 from $19,316,000 the previous year.

During 1940 the State appropriated $11,250,000 for relief, all of which was distributed, and the municipalities contributed $5,439,994, a great portion of which was refunded to them.

Demonstrations in Turin Against United States

Rome, Feb. 6.—Demonstrations against the United States have occurred at Turin, it was revealed on reliable authority today as Italy's anti-American press campaign increased in intensity.

On January 29th, according to this information, Turin police prevented a crowd of students and Italian troops from reaching the American consulate, which since then has been heavily guarded.

Authorities at Milan also were reported to have discovered and frustrated plans for a similar anti-American demonstration there.

Italians Attempt A Counter-Attack

Athens, Feb. 6.—An attempted Italian counter-attack in the Tepeleni sector of the central Albanian front failed completely and resulted in heavy losses to the Fascists, according to last minute dispatches received in Athens today.

These reports said the Italian troops were supported by tanks and armored cars but were unable even to dent the Greek lines.

After capturing the Trembesina mountain range, officials said, the Greeks are now advancing toward important new positions while the Italians in the Tepeleni area are in a precarious position.

Greek planes flew over the Italian forces in this area, dropping pamphlets telling the Italians it was "futile to resist further" and inviting them to surrender.

McCormick Appears Before Committee

Washington, Feb. 6.—Outlining the natural defenses of the United States, coupled with its military forces, Col. Robert R. McCormick, Chicago publisher, today told Congress that "it is fantastic to suggest that we are in any danger of attack."

Testifying on the Lease-Lend Bill, McCormick declared—"Even if we did not have these overwhelming strategic advantages, this panic over possible German attack cannot be justified."

Belittling the success of any German attempt to cross the Atlantic to seize bases in South America for an invasion of this country from these points, McCormick said—"I cannot conceive of anyone having the slightest fear of an attack along this line, if he has any respect at all for our own air force."

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

A sprightly and tuneful modern romance, adorned with songs, dances and hilarious complications, forms the basis of "No, No, Nanette," Anna Neagle's latest film vehicle, at the Grand Theatre today.

Topping its predecessor, "Irene," in gaiety and novelty, the new offering deals with a hectic triangle of a pretty heiress, a successful artist and a prosperous theatrical producer. The girl is interested in both men, but not for romantic reasons; she's using them for purposes of her own. Her uncle has become involved with some gold-diggers and Nanette seeks to get him out of his difficulties.

However, the two men fall in love with Nanette, which complicates matters, for she can't explain the situation. Moreover, her aunt becomes suspicious at the goings-on, and events pile up until the unique climax when everything is straightened out aboard a west-bound Stratolliner.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By Howard L. Zepp, Th. M.)

O God, help us to know anew this day that Thou art the Architect and Master Builder of our lives. Make us willing to study Thy plans and specifications for the good life, and choose wisely the materials Thou wouldst have us put into our life-house. Help us to arise above our handicaps, our past history, our errors, and sins. Help us to organize victory out of defeat. Give us grace to keep on working and to trust Thee for the outcome. Amen.

ing country and snowcapped mountains breezed into the Ritz Theatre yesterday where Paramount's "Cherokee Strip" opened, starring Richard Dix. Against this background there evolved as thrilling a western romance as has been enjoyed here in too long a time.

"Murder Over New York" is the second feature, this being a Charlie Chan story.

FASHION PARADE

By Jane Cochran

(I. N. S. Fashion Editor)
NEW YORK — (INS) — Fashion, ever on a search for something new—or a disguised revival of something old—would dress you in capes this spring.

Each cape offered for sale, however, should carry a warning tag—there was never a fashion that could so completely one type of figure and do so much damage to another.

The tall or slim woman in a cape is stunningly dressed, but the short and somewhat rounded woman in a cape looks herself.

Capes top suits, used instead of the conventional topcoat, appear over simple dresses or as glamorous additions to an evening gown.

Capes over tailored suits are perhaps the most striking. They're as severely tailored as the suit itself, yet manage to impart an air of femininity.

One outstanding example is a suit of blue and off-white—the skirt blue, the long jacket white and the cape of blue, edged in a white border and with white lapels. Insets of white accent the arm line.

Suit capes are usually either three-quarter or skirt length.

The cape style has been used, with great success, in evening clothes. One gorgeous dress, combining the influence of classical Greece and the tribal costumes of the Sahara, is in white and turquoise. The dress, of white crepe, is simply draped with a full skirt. Over all is a white silk crepe cape, lined with turquoise. A white turban with drape of turquoise completes the costume.

Separate capes, to take the place of a coat, are shown for both day and evening. They're certain to lend new interest to the wardrobe after several seasons of monotonous and simple spring coats.

Capes for evening are ideal over the many bouffant skirts that are appearing. Snugly tailored at the shoulder, they allow for plenty of expansion below the waistline.

MANHATTAN SOAP TO PLAY FRANKLIN A. C. IN TILT HERE TONIGHT

A Close Contest Is Expected When The Two Rival Teams Meet

VOLTZ TO PLAY K. OF C.

Franks Have Won Three Games and Manhattan Lost One

A close contest is expected on the Italian Mutual Aid floor tonight as the Franklin A. C. meets the Manhattan Soap A. C. in a tilt which may be the deciding factor of the second half race, in the other scheduled fray, Voltz-Texaco meets the Knights of Columbus five.

The Franks have won their three games played in the second half while Manhattan has lost but one. A loss to the Franklin team will mean a four-way deadlock for first place with Franklin, Manhattan, Rohm and Haas, and Profy's being the contesting teams.

The soap-makers cannot afford to lose tonight's game as it will practically eliminate them from the race. The league-leading Franklin club has one more stiff contest after this, that being with the Profy team. The other two games on Franklin's schedule may be "breathers."

So a triumph tonight for Franklin, according to statistics will assure the "kids" of at least a deadlock for first place that is unless Voltz and Auto Boys can gather enough scoring power to stop the youngster. And a victory over Profy's will give the Franks the second half crown.

But tonight is the tough barrier. The soap-makers play best when under pressure and tonight they will be under more pressure than ever before as they cannot afford to lose and be eliminated from the second half chase.

Manhattan will have its fullest force for the contest, even Joe Byne, the lanky Morrisville boy, is expected to be in uniform. But Manager Dugan will start: Punkie Zeffries, Nick Hufnell, Joe Snyder, Joe Gallagher and Maurice Mulligan. The Franklin lineup will be composed of: Royce Sagolla, Bert Baratta, Chick Ciarella, Bob Petrick and Fred Baratta.

The Knights-Voltz team should prove an interesting match as the winner will climb out of the cellar. Both teams have dropped their three tilts played, although Voltz is playing a better game than the Casseys.

In his lineup tonight, Manager O'Brien will have the Morrisville boys, Zack Nowinski, Buckman, and Gavlin, as well as Chewing, Seneca, Smith, Roberts and Lake.

The Voltz starting line-up will see in action: Cooper, Pollack, Carter, Berry and Hutchison.

First game will get under way at eight o'clock sharp.

VOLTZ BOWLERS GO INTO FIRST PLACE

Voltz-Texaco bowlers went into first place by taking four points from the Grundy five. Danny Mazzillo starred for the gasoline boys with a beautiful 622. Capriotti led the losers with 484. Bailey's Electric, former first place holders, dropped three points to the K. of C. to drop into second place. Gene Ciotti paced the Casseys with 529, as Ratcliffe rolled 533 to lead the electricians.

In probably the most closest match game of the Bristol Alleys, the Y. M. A. dropped four points to the Leedom five, although they lost total pins by only 18 points. Mulligan took high honors for the rug-makers with 491, as manager Leach hit the maples for 521, which was high for the Y. M. A.

In the other match of the evening, El-Bart-Gin split even with Stemme's Grille, each taking two points. Anchorman Tomlinson rolled the sphere down the wooden ways for a 576 total, which was high the distillers. As usual, Joe Amisson led Stemme's Grille, rolling 585.

Major C. L. Weston, M. C., To Be Banquet Speaker

The function, the outstanding event of the Cadet year, will also be graced by the presence of Captain Nolan, British Consul General, of Philadelphia. Adding to the gaiety of the evening following the graduation exercises and address, will be seven outstanding variety acts of entertainment, foremost among them being the famed "Toomer" act, with which many Bristolians are familiar and anticipate witnessing again.

The same popular swing band which played dinner and dance music last year, will be enlarged for the occasion. I. Johnston Hetherington, Baltimore, Md., who has served as toastmaster at all banquets conducted by the Cadets, will again assume this post. The dinner will be served at six o'clock.

Tickets may be procured from the following members of the ticket committee: Evan Vandegrift, chairman; Harold James, Ary VanFrassen, and Jacob C. Schmidt, Jr.

The graduates this year will be: Edward Jeffries and Alfred Capriotti, 1932-40; Fred L. Stewart, Jr., 1934-40; James L. Nyase, 1936-41; Betty D. Banes, 1937-41; Richard C. Capriotti, Anna E. Keers, Doris L. Stewart, 1937-41, and James T. Prutchey, 1938-41.

Hudson Launches Pre-Spring Sales Drive

Returning from a meeting with N. K. Vanderzee, Eastern Sales Manager of the Hudson Motor Car Company, held in Philadelphia, yesterday, Richard T. Myers, Hudson dealer for this territory, declared that Hudson will immediately launch one of the most aggressive pre-spring merchandising drives the company has yet undertaken in preparation for what is believed will be the most active early spring market the automobile industry has yet known. The meeting was one of 51 similar gatherings now being held throughout the country, Vanderzee said.

Commenting upon the aims of the program, Vanderzee said: "It should not be forgotten that the automobile itself is an important factor in speeding up the nation's productive forces. The world is on wheels today and motor cars have their own task to do in defense activities by enabling men to reach their jobs again for return and recreation. Then too, it is only through a healthy volume of normal business that our defense program can be made possible and paid for and normal business today is geared to automobile transportation. With this in mind we are preparing, by this merchandising program, to place our selling organization in a position to meet what we believe will be an earlier-than-usual seasonal demand."

Mr. Myers disclosed that Hudson's domestic retail sale for the calendar year just ended amounted to 89,709 cars, representing an increase of 22 per cent over 1939. "With the new year just started," Vanderzee declared, "Hudson has already shipped in the United States alone a volume of 1541 model cars amounting to 60 per cent of the entire 1940 model domestic production. The answer, of course, is found in the cars themselves as evidenced by Hudson's recent winning of awards in the field of safety and economy."

Mr. Myers pointed out that the Gilmore Grand Canyon price class economy trophy recently won by a stock 1941 Hudson Six Sedan, which averaged 24.56 miles per gallon for 600 miles at an average speed of 43.19 miles per hour is the second winning award captured by Hudson within a month, the first being the 1941 Safety Engineering Award for the safest body design recently presented by the Alfred M. Pratt Co., publishers of Safety Engineering Magazine.
